Carter Harrison's Bath.

Hon, Carter H. Harrison, in a letter to the Chicago Mail from Hiogo, Japan, says of the Japanese people : We have passed vast acres of cultivated fields and seen many thousands of people engaged in their daily occupations. We have slept in their houses and eaten of their food. We have seen injurious to them recking in sweat, but never in filth. We have seen them in hilacious mirthnever once in violent anger. We have seen them to their nakedness, but never once in and in tother poverty, but have never on a single look of sullenness or of despair. We have seen them is abject poverty; we Steam Flooring & Planing Mill have never seen them begging alms, except crepit age. We have seen them in every way shocking all preconc-ived ideas of decence and modesty, yet we have never nowould show that any one was aware things were being done which modesty would forbid.

We have met women in the highway neked down to the hips, and saw no look that betakened a single thought of shame, and within a few hundred yards we would meet a beautiful, well-clothed woman, whose eyes would drop in pretty moder by because we gave her a look of involuntary admiration. There is here no such thing as conventional decency. With a high civilization—in many respects very high—the people still seem to be, to a certain extent, in a state of animal nature. Is the conscience seared—or has conscience naver been awakened by a sense of sin? The psychologist must solve the problem and answer the query; I cannot. I am still in a species of amsz-mont among this inconsistent, this great, this little, this bright, and yet groveling, immoral this inconsistent, this great, this little, this bright, and yet groveling, immoral

He describes his bath at a Japanese hotel: Then one of the girls tells us the bath is ready. We undress and put on a robe. A A girl shows us the bath room. It is down stairs, and has only an open Japanese screen to shut off the gaze of the habitues of the house. The tub is a round wooden vat about four feet deep. You put your foot in to try the temperature. The foot at once takes the bue of a boiled lob-ter. You nearly shriek. The girl laughs and empties a pail of co d water in. You then wait for her to go out. She does not budge. You amine before purchasing.
Satisfaction guaranteed. Call and see. [ap12] can't to save you, think of Japanese enough to tell her to git. Finally, by a lot of awkward signs, you ge But not an inch farther. There she stands and waits, as innocently as did good old Eve when Adam poured into her willing

There are things that try men's souls and call for heroic courage. One can scale the bristling wall, can march u to the mouth of a hot throated cannon, can, ount the scaf fold with the shining axe glistening in the sun, can tell the girl he loves how he would win and wed her, can make a maiden and wed her, can make a maiden of the sun, can tell the girl he loves how he would win and wed her, can make a maiden and the sun of the sun But these are easy tasks compared to that of getting into a hot bath with a pretty Japacese girl looking at you through a rattan screen-looking at you, too, with as much sang froid as if she was seeing a three months old baby stripped of its little flannel

Finally patience gives out, you drop your robe and jump in. Good heavens, the pail of cold water did cool the thing, but the furnace is still adding caloric. You feel much as did the poor Japanese martyrs when, a few hundred years ago, the heathen wretches boiled them into gresse. You forget the girl and everything else and jump out thoronghly clothed; i. c., clothed in scarlet skin. Ab, these are things which try men's souls.

After the bath partitions are drawn beween the several compartments, and we lie down to sleep. We get into a dose. Then we hear a noise as if two or three freight trains were being switched on the floor. The crains were being switched on the floor. The outside wooden screens, which close the nouse in, are being put in. I said the house is open on all sides, but at bedtime it is all shut up by means of sliding screens which, ouring the day, are hidden in niches in the

By this time we begin to itch. They say fless abound in Japan. I have not seen a ingle one. But, when wakeful, imagination or reality has made them crawl about me in reckiess redundancy. At last we get to sleep, and early the next morning take our

QUEEN KAPIOLANI'S PARIS DRESSES. - A correspondent at Honolulu informs me that after the return of Queen Kapiolani and for the election of a member of the Common Counher sister in-law to the capital of Hawaii their Royal Hignesses had the portraits taken of them in London-the finest speci-ments of Walery's skill-exposed in the shop-windows, both ladies being dressed in some of those superb costumes which were the envy of female hearts in New York and London last summer. This breach of naladies of Honolulu, who, having held a public meeting, at which a resolution was manimously passed disapproving of the attire of the two royal ladies, went straight way in a body to the shops in question and destroyed all the portraits. Not satisfied even with this bit of revenge, and no doub stimulated by the recent success of the mercies. After terrible lamentations on the part of the Queen and the Princess Lilioulogalini, his Majesty had to comply with the request of the irate native ladies, who tore the dresses to shreds, and moreover extract ed the promise that the two ladies should in future only wear "native" costumes—gar-ments which rather display than conceal the female form divine —Vanity Fair.

Brown's Little Joke.

"Why, Brown, how short your coat is," said Jones one day to his friend Brown, who wittily replied: "Yes; but it will be long enough before I get another." Some men rate of six per cent. rance.
